

Institute for Neuromarketing

GUIDELINES FOR AUTHORS

If you're looking to write engaging blog content, the key lies in a well-structured post that captures readers' interest. Here are some guidelines to help you create compelling content that will keep your audience engaged:

Structuring your blog posting

Start with a title that catches the reader's attention; a snappy headline is the first thing your audience will see and can determine whether they decide to read on. In the opening paragraph, establish the main point and key message you want to convey. Use the subsequent paragraphs to provide the details that will support your argument. Conclude with some background information on yourself, including a brief bio and contact details.

Writing style

Write in a friendly, informal tone of voice, using the first-person pronoun, "I," and drawing on personal experiences in neuromarketing. Focus on describing your thoughts, rather than simply stating them, and pose questions to readers to get their feedback and engage them in the discussion. Always be polite and respectful of differing viewpoints and cultural perspectives. Use the Harvard Writing Style for referencing and provide a complete list of sources and a bibliography. Please write a short biography that will present you as the Author of the text without the need for additional inclusion of links to the websites of companies/organizations you work for. We kindly ask you to provide us with your e-mail address which will appear below your blog post so the readers can contact you directly in case they have any questions related to your blog post.

Content topics

Choose topics that you are knowledgeable and passionate about. Think critically about what your audience might find interesting or useful and try to provide educational or informative content that your readers can learn from. Avoid using the content topic as your headline title, however. If you have great ideas for topics not listed, feel free to suggest new ideas related to neuromarketing, consumer behavior, marketing, or IP to info@neuromarketinginstitut.com.

The Most Researchable Topics in Neuromarketing:

#Emotional Responses to Advertising

Neurobranding perception & Loyalty

Pricing Strategies with the use of Neuromarketing

Neuromarketing in digital marketing

Neuromarketing and Consumer Neuroscience

Understanding the Impact of Brand Communication on the Human Brain

Investigating the Role of Emotions in Consumer Decision Making

Exploring the Effectiveness of Neuromarketing Technique in Predicting Human Behavior

#Studying the Impact of Social Influence on Consumer Behavior

Please note: Start writing on the desired topic and please send your materials once a week, on Wednesday, until 04:00 p.m. CET to: info@neuromarketinginstitut.com All the photos submitted have to be available for commercial use in order for them to be published on the website. Submitting any defamatory or illegal material of any nature is prohibited. This includes texts, graphics, video, and/or audio content. Creating a text with the intention of committing or condoning an illegal act is strictly prohibited. Please provide us with legal photos for your blog with the link to the location where you have taken the photos.

Technical requirements:

Please send us your photo that will appear next to your blog post. Technical instructions:

Author photo: 1080x1080px (between 1.91:1 and 1:1 aspect ratio)

Author Biography: up to 140 words or 955 characters

Blog photos: 2000x1500px (min 10% margin on all sides).

Things to avoid

Steer clear of negative or judgmental language, instead opening a dialogue and inviting discussion and debate. Avoid pushing your own beliefs on others and do not include links to commercial or inappropriate sites.; refrain from sharing specific personal details. Always provide legal photos for your blog with the link to the location where you have taken the photos or credit the author if this photo is approved for commercial use.

Copyright and the law

As an author submitting content to the Institute for Neuromarketing, you retain your copyright but grant the Institute a perpetual, royalty-free, non-exclusive, sub-licensing right and license to use, reproduce, modify, adapt, publish, translate, create derivative works from, distribute, perform, play, and exercise all copyright and publicity rights concerning such content worldwide. Should you prefer not to grant such rights, do not submit your contributions to the Institute for Neuromarketing. Additionally, you guarantee that all contributions are your own work, do not infringe upon any laws, and do not contain defamatory content.

You also agree to indemnify the Institute for Neuromarketing against all legal fees, damages, and other expenses that the Institute for Neuromarketing may incur because of your breach of the above warranty. You also agree to waive any moral rights in your contribution for the purposes of its submission to and publication on the Institute for Neuromarketing website, as well as the other purposes specified above. You may not violate, plagiarize, or infringe on the rights of third parties, including copyright, trademark, trade secret, privacy, personal, publicity, or proprietary rights. In case of a dispute arising from or in relation to the Terms and Conditions and/or the specific terms appearing elsewhere on this site relating to explicit material, the latter shall prevail.

